Welcome to the University of Arkansas System

Embracing and expanding the historic trust inherent in the land-grant philosophy, the University of Arkansas provides communities in Arkansas with access to academic and professional opportunities, develops intellectual growth and cultural awareness in its students, and applies knowledge and research skills to an ever-changing human condition. Providing the state's only legal, medical, and architectural education as well as the primary engineering education in the state, the University of Arkansas also offers 188 graduate programs in 24 academic areas including teaching, business, engineering, medicine, law and agriculture.

As the sole source of comprehensive agricultural research and extension services, the University conducts most of the state's federally funded research. With over 42,000 students and 13,700 employees, the University of Arkansas System has an aggregate annual budget of over $1.1 billion. While the University is a single corporate entity under the laws and Constitution of the State of Arkansas, the President, Chancellors, and Vice President of Agriculture delegate their authority broadly throughout the University and its operating divisions.

Our Past, Our Future . . .

The Arkansas General Assembly established the University in Fayetteville in 1871 as the Arkansas Industrial University, and under the authority of the Morrill Act of 1862, it became the state land-grant institution and first state-assisted college in Arkansas. On opening day, January 22, 1873, there were four teachers and eight students.

In 1873 the University established a campus in Pine Bluff, which was designated as a land-grant campus of the University from 1875 until 1927, and then uniting again with the System in 1972. In 1879, the University accepted responsibility for academic management and operation of a privately established not-for-profit medical campus in Little Rock. This campus merged into the University System in 1911, and is now known as the University of Arkansas for Medical Sciences.

In 1969, Little Rock University joined the UA System, becoming the University of Arkansas at Little Rock. In 1971, the Monticello campus was added, dissolving its predecessor, Arkansas A & M College. Phillips Community College in Helena joined the UA System in 1996, later adding campuses in Stuttgart and DeWitt. Also in 1996, Red River Technical College in Hope joined the System and was renamed the University of Arkansas Community College at Hope. In 1998, Gateway Technical College in Batesville joined the System and was renamed the University of Arkansas Community College at Batesville. In 2001, Petit Jean College joined the System and was renamed the University of Arkansas Community College at Morrilton. Also in 2001, Cossatot Technical College joined the System and was renamed Cossatot Community College of the University of Arkansas. On January 1, 2002, Westark College joined the System and was renamed University of Arkansas at Fort Smith. The most recent additions to the UA System are the Arkansas School for Mathematics, Sciences, and the Arts on January 1, 2004, and the University of Arkansas Clinton School of Public Service on July 1, 2004.

Keenly aware of the continually changing world, the University is committed to study and anticipate an evolving society. By updating our offerings and featured programs accordingly, we prepare our students to be leaders of tomorrow.

Our institutions are designed to serve the people of the state effectively and provide national leadership as well. While the cooperative strength and combined resources of our institutions are a plus for the University of Arkansas, the unique attributes of each institution are also a major advantage. The individual locations offer significantly different programs, emphasis, student life and community opportunities.
